Governor Carney Presents Budget Reset Plan for Fiscal Year 2018

Long-term plan addresses Delaware's structural budget challenges

DOVER, Del. - Governor Carney on Thursday presented his plan to close a $385 million structural budget shortfall and balance the Fiscal Year 2018 state budget through an equal mix of budget reductions and new revenues.

Governor Carney's budget proposal – combined with the plan to study long-term efficiencies and improvements through the Government Efficiency and Accountability Review Board (GEAR) – would contain long-term costs, rebalance Delaware's revenue portfolio to respond to economic growth, and maintain key public investments.

Despite significant growth in mandatory costs in healthcare and education, Governor Carney's budget would increase spending just 0.29 percent over the current year.

“We are presenting a balanced, long-term solution to Delaware's structural budget challenges that will keep Delaware economically competitive,” said Governor Carney. “This proposal requires shared sacrifice – and that starts with a commitment by state government to operate more efficiently and spend taxpayer dollars wisely, while maintaining key investments in healthcare, education and our economy. I look forward to working with the General Assembly through June 30.”

“The budget framework presented on Thursday results in flat budget growth overall,” said Mike Jackson, Director of the Office of Management and Budget. “This proposal not only allows us to balance our budget in Fiscal Year 2018, but would address the persistent projected budget deficits that we have experienced the past several years.”

“The changes we have proposed would make Delaware's revenue portfolio more responsive to Delaware's economy, and reduce volatility in the annual budget process,” said Rick Geisenberger, Secretary of the Delaware Department of Finance. “This is a balanced plan that will put Delaware on a long-term, sustainable path, while maintaining competitiveness with surrounding states.”
